

Ketamine infusion

Patient information

With many pain syndromes, it is possible to reach a stage where all treatments have failed and even high doses of morphine-like substances do not lead to pain reduction. This is a condition of overstimulation of the nervous system, also known as wind-up.

Before the treatment

- Ensure that you come on time. The local outpatient pain clinic will discuss times with you.
- Ensure that you are wearing comfortable clothing on the day of the treatment.
- Drinks (coffee, tea) and a light lunch are provided by the nurses on duty. The Ketanest-S treatment is administered via an infusion in the day care clinic. This treatment takes all day. The treatment can have temporary adverse effects during the day. You do not have to be fasting and may eat and drink normally during the day.

The effect of the treatment manifests after several days and can persist for several months. If this treatment has a favourable effect on the pain, without unacceptable adverse effects occurring, the treatment can be repeated if necessary. It seems that a repeat treatment produces an effective result that lasts longer.

After the treatment

You may not drive for the rest of the day. You must ensure that someone can bring you home. Adverse effects that can occur during and after the treatment:

- double vision;
- hallucinations;
- feeling drunk;
- rapid heartbeat;
- sleepiness;
- high blood pressure;
- nausea;
- dizziness.

These adverse effects are temporary and usually occur in the first few days. Adverse effects can also disappear after reducing or stopping the treatment. Medicines can be given to alleviate nausea and vomiting.

Result

Four weeks after the treatment, a nurse from the outpatient pain clinic will call you. During this telephone consultation, the result of the treatment will be evaluated and the follow-up policy arranged. Take note of your pain score in the first two weeks after the treatment. You can write down any questions to discuss during the telephone consultation.
